SANTA FE ART INSTITUTE presents Robert Rich
A solo concert of organic electronics and sonic surrealism with visual stimulation.
Thursday, May 18th, Tipton Hall, College of Santa Fe
Lecture: 5:30 pm, Reception: 6:15 pm, Concert: 7 pm

Ticket Prices: $5 Lecture only, $15 Concert only or concert and lecture

Robert Rich will perform a solo concert of instrumental electronic music, incorporating instruments such as flutes and lap steel guitar along with analog modular synthesizer, keyboards and computers. In a continuous set of approximately 90 minutes, Rich will perform selections from among his many recordings, including his latest CD "Electric Ladder," woven together with improvisations and new material. Computer generated motion graphics by Daniel Colvin will accompany Rich's music, along with custom laser projectors.

Robert Rich

With almost 30 albums, Robert Rich has helped define the genres of ambient music, dark-ambient, tribal and trance. His distinctive sound comes from the use of home-made acoustic and electronic instruments, microtonal tunings, computer-based signal processing, chaotic systems and feedback networks. Rich has released critically acclaimed collaborations with Steve Roach, Ian Boddy, Alio Die and Brian Lustmord, and has performed in caves, cathedrals, planetaria, art galleries and concert halls throughout Europe and North America.

The concert and lecture are elements of the Santa Fe Art Institute's 2006 Storytelling: History, Myth and Narrative Series. For more information on the series please visit SFAI's website at www.sfai.org or call 505-424-5050. The Santa Fe Art Institute is located at 1600 St. Michael's Drive, Santa Fe, New Mexico 87505.
